2010 Lloyd Chardonnay – After honing his craft as the winemaker of Rombauer from 2001 to 2008, Robert Lloyd introduced his own chardonnay. A much smaller production than Rombauer, (only 800 cases total) Robert envisioned a wine similar to what he is famous for yet with more of a “Reserve” style. Staying true to what we’ve come to expect from his wine, this chardonnay packs an oaky butterscotch punch, yet is balanced out by tropical fruits and a touch of vanilla. If you’re a Rombauer fan, I’d highly recommend giving this wine a whirl. Just ask your server for a taste, it won’t disappoint.

2006 Bartalotti Cabernet Sauvignon – You could say that Gino and Chris Bartalotti were destined to make wine. Their family has a long tradition of making wine and growing grapes for generations in Italy. It wasn't until 1994 that Chris finally gave in to his calling and travelled back to Italy to learn age-old wine techniques from his family. Upon returning home, he teamed up with brother Gino and together they started Bartalotti. They have spent the last 10 years honing and perfecting their craft. The cabernet starts with a nice blend of ripe black cherry and cocoa which then gives way to hints of toasted oak and tobacco. Supple tannins, along-side a solid finish, round out this gem. If you are in the mood for a Napa Cab that's “off the beaten path” to pair with your steak, this may be just the wine for you.
